

British Values Statement - Health and Social Care

British Values underpin many aspects of the course that we deliver within Health and Social Care. As such, these themes recur in many topics that we teach in each of our lessons.

As part of our GCSE and A Level courses, both Law, Democracy, Positive Values and Employment Law are covered to some depth as well as the importance of these laws in determining British liberties and freedoms. In our health units, we analyse the impact of mutual respect, tolerance and equal opportunities when working with employees and people from a wide range of sectors. Discussions and debates on how different ethnic groups, religious beliefs and male and female gender equalities are regularly witnessed within lessons, these are key to students understanding how every individual has a place in today's society.
